CONGRESSIONAL UPDATE

The House returned from recess Tuesday to pass the debt ceiling hike that the Senate passed last week. This measure only kicks the can down the road to the beginning of December.

That sets up the rest of October and all of November to be stressful, as the House and Senate face multiple deadlines, not the least of which is passing a budget to keep the government operating past the December 3 date when the continuing resolution expires, and once again dealing with the debt limit.

House Budget Committee chair Rep. Yarmuth (D-KY) on Tuesday announced he will not run for another term. In a social media video, Yarmuth said he wants “to have more control of my time in the years I have left,” including spending time with his family. Yarmuth will be 75 at the end of his current term.

EXTREMISM AND VETERANS

Experts told the House Veterans Affairs Committee on Wednesday that the participation of even a small number of veterans and service members in extremist organizations could be damaging to the country. The hearing comes after revelations that veterans appear to be disproportionately represented among those identified as having participated in the January 6 attack on the Capitol. Previous studies and hearings have revealed that extremist organizations, including White supremacist groups, actively recruit service members and veterans due to their training with weapons and attack strategies.

The hearing was not without controversy, with some GOP Members charging that Democrats were seeking to criminalize certain political viewpoints. “Free speech must be protected,” announced HVAC ranking member Rep. Bost (R-IL). He did add that “it is another thing altogether” should a person act on their ideals with violence.

Committee chair Rep. Takano (D-CA) intends to continue holding hearings on the issue. Witnesses and lawmakers at this hearing called upon DoD, the VA, and veterans service organizations to continue investigating the presence of extremism among their memberships, and the ways organizations are targeting their people.

The day after the hearing, Fort Bragg acknowledged the October 6 arrest of James Phillip Mault from New York, who joined the military in May after having participated in the January attack. A Fort Bragg spokesman told Military.com that it is unclear how Mault made it through pre-accession screening. He was identified through social media photos spraying chemical agents at law enforcement officials inside the Capitol building. Mault told the FBI that he was there, but denies assaulting anyone.
